COME AS YOU CARE

As a place to ready, study, or meet with friends, the Sherrod Library served many purposes for students coming to school.

An avid supporter of the Buccaneers, John Shortridge came dressed for the occasion to a tailgate party held before the home game against Wofford.

Before the new year began, resident students came with books, clothes, and appliances to furnish their home away from home.

AN OPEN INVITATION

Come as you are. An open invitation to investigate, explore, and to seek new beginnings was extended to prospective students. Administrators, professors, students, and recruiters offered the opportunity, and over 11,000 students accepted.

From Alaska to India they came. With them they brought customs, styles of dress, religious beliefs, and unique talents. From the unpretentious presence of the Indian students in their native dress, to the powerhouse tennis star from South Africa in his favorite worn tennis shoes, to the beauty queen from down the road in her most comfortable sweat pants, students were invited to a melting pot of free-spirited attitudes, old-fashioned traditions, and hard-core academics. Different personalities on campus contributed to the blending of cosmologies that occurred.

Students with many talents arrived this fall to take part in the many campus organizations.

During the "Buccaneer Football Kickoff '88" at Allandale Mansion in Kingsport, the Buc balloon attracted much attention.

Cheerleaders and mascots converged this summer to attend the Universal Cheerleaders Association Collegiate cheerleading camp. The camp welcomed students from Texas to Wisconsin to the East Coast.

Professors, too, came from somewhat dissimilar backgrounds. Retired business executives arrived to teach business students of the "real world." Outdoorsmen attired in blue jeans and flannel shirts travelled from the Appalachian Mountains in order to teach.

Community members at large also found their way to the campus. Athletic camps were held during summer months while businessmen held self-help seminars year round. Guest lecturers frequented the campus such as former presidents, political candidates, and screen actors and actresses.

The summer days passed more quickly when engaging in a favorite pastime of tossing a frisbee.

The Buc balloon, owned by two alumni of the university Ken and Brenda Clark, graces the sky above the campus.

A WELCOME EXTENDED

With the Appalachian Mountains as a backdrop, the university welcomed all who arrived to a campus of natural beauty. These mountains attracted many with their sporting opportunities or their scenic value and were integrated into the lives of many students quickly. Whether students were skiing, hiking, camping, or merely walking across the hill-ladden campus, they were constantly reminded of this ever-important part of East Tennessee.

Sororities, fraternities, and over a hundred academic, honor, and special interest groups populated the campus to help students find their own niche in which to become a part of the university.

Parking woes which afflicted most students made it difficult to arrive in class on time.

The Ampitheatre served many purposes to students studying, meeting, or just relaxing.

The East Tennessee Suzuki Program drew participants from ages three and up to its classes of music instruction.

STUDENT LIFE

As an alumnus, Timothy Busfield, star of ABC's thirtysomething, returned for the 1988 Homecoming celebration.

In a year filled with political debates, religious questions, and temperamental weather, students found themselves involved in more than just casual conversations. Each student brought different backgrounds, beliefs, and ideals to campus which added variety to the political rallies and guest lectures which appeared on campus. The controversial year provided many with an interesting and exciting student life. ||| Sarah Jamerson

First impressions

Preview was a great way to introduce the campus to the entering freshmen and the transfer students. This year, for the first time, students were placed in small groups with other students from their dorms. This gave the students a chance to begin their lasting friendships with their neighbors.

Preview began on Thursday morning, August 25, with the students moving into their dorms. Once they were settled, the excitement began and continued through Sunday night. Being led by students also added to the Preview excitement. Preview began by the students attending several meetings pertaining to college life. Some of these were held in small conference rooms for the small groups. Others were held in the Culp Center or the amphitheater.

Four-corner volleyball was played above the amphitheater, along with "Win, Lose, or Draw." The small groups competed for prizes. The attendance was good for most activities. Because of the first impressions of ETSU, most students felt more comfortable on their first day of class after attending Preview. ||| Paula McDaniel

Breaking in

Breakin' In Week began on August 29 and continued through September 1.

To start the events off, a workshop was held on Monday called "How to Recruit New Members for Your Organization." Tuesday brought a twister competition. Greeks also did their painting of signs and an orientation for minority students was held. To end the day a street dance was held in the Cave. Steven Boley said, "It was great fun, and I met many new people."

Then, Wednesday came and an activities fair was held. Many came to meet with representatives from clubs on campus. That afternoon a picnic was served by Morrison's Custom Management, and following was the game show "The Nucleus of Nerdity" which stared Horney K. Fletcher, the "ultimate nerd."

Thursday was filled with student-group volleyball and water-balloon-toss competition. To end the week of activities was the concert "The Famous Vacationers" who came from Chicago, Illinois.

The week came to a close, but most who took part returned the next week with many new friends. The week was very busy and well worth the time spent in the activities, according to Mrs. Debbie Craig, Director of Student Activities Center. "We were really pleased with our outcome," Mrs. Craig said. "This was the first year that Breakin' In Week was held. We hope that in years to come it will continue to grow."

Anticipation

This year's incoming freshman class was one of the largest groups ever recorded. Orientation was required for all incoming freshmen. It was held several times during the summer. The first day was held in June and the last was held in August.

The first activity of the day was for all the freshmen to meet in the theater of the Culp Center. There, they were shown slides and were told about college life. The freshmen were then introduced to several administrative officers, who in turn introduced life at ETSU through lectures and personal experiences. After the assembly, the new students met with academic advisers who helped in the planning of classes. Each teacher and staff member helped the freshmen feel welcome. Even though this freshman class was the largest in years, individual guidance was given to make the jittery freshmen more comfortable.

At the end of orientation most freshmen anticipated attending East Tennessee State University and the excitement of beginning college life. ||| Janet Crawford

Parents often accompanied entering freshmen to orientation to offer support and to learn about the university themselves.

'Reason for hope'

Former NBC news correspondent Edwin Newman spoke to the graduating class of 1988 during the spring commencement exercises.

Newman, the author of two books dealing with the use of the English language, avoided the typically unspectacular themes of most commencement addresses.

"I feel I must offer you graduates an apology," he began. "You probably expected me to lay a burden upon you ... [but] the state of our language commands our attention."

"Business leaders are looking for people who can speak and write effectively," he said, "and they are far from optimistic about getting it."

He cited information supporting his claim of America's ineffective use of its language, such as the United States having the highest illiteracy rate of all industrial nations.

"It has become typical of American English that enough is almost never enough. When words are plain, specific, and do the job, why not let them?"

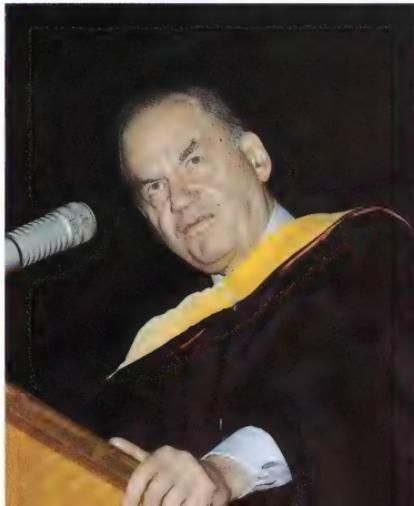

"Libraries are now learning resource centers. Bank tellers are now customer service representatives. We speak of self-admitted drug users, as if someone else could admit it for you."

"Does it make the citizens of Albuquerque, New Mexico feel safer not to have a fire department, but instead a fire retardation and suppression department?

"We hear of the soap that lathers up really good, and some people think the word 'ain't' sells more hamburgers than 'are no.'

"There is reason for hope. We may be on the way back because it is increasingly understood that a nation enwashed in jargon and opaque language on one hand and enwashed in illiteracy and semi-illiteracy on the other is not healthy. It is damaging itself." | | | Dennis Brooks and Susan Saylor

Rushing Greek

Fraternity and sorority rush was an exciting and successful experience for both Greeks and the young men and women who chose to go through the fall membership drive.

This year's sorority rush was one of the largest and most successful in recent years. A total of one hundred and thirty nine girls were pledged to the five sororities on campus. It was a week of parties, singing, getting to know each other, making friends, and having fun.

When asked why someone would want to be in sorority, Stacy Cummings said, "Being in a sorority has a very positive influence on young women. A sorority provides leadership experience and a strong support group through which they can each learn and grow."

"A sorority alleviates the stress that an incoming freshman might have. The opportunities are endless, and the life-long friendships are irreplaceable," said Beverly Pendergast, an Alpha Delta Pi.

This fall's fraternity rush was the week following sorority rush. It was a less formal process and a very different procedure from sorority rush. Each of the eight fraternities on campus hosted a rush party each night during the week to get to know prospective members.

"Fraternities strive to maintain their goals of brotherhood, scholarship, athletics, and long lasting friendship," said Scott Thomas, IFC President.

Larry Brooks, president of Lambda Chi Alpha, stated that "membership in a Greek organization provides a unique living-learning experience rarely found in any other type of organization. It's not all just parties. Every Greek organization on campus is affiliated with some sort of national philanthropy, and many are involved in the surrounding community." ||| Paige P. Williams

Parking despair

Parking was a thorn in the side of most students and faculty alike this year. Finding a spot to ditch the auto was sometimes too difficult for students in a rush.

Convenience was not a quality that came to mind, according to some students.

"At the start of the year I had problems parking because everybody came at that same time," said commuter Scotty Carrier. "Now, I don't have any problem because I leave early, but I do think we need more parking spaces."

"It's a pain once in a while," said freshman Chris Branham. "When I come back from home to my dorm, some people already have the spots. We pay to stay there, so we should have spaces close."

Three parking stickers were sold for every space on campus. Due to students attending at different times of day, this ratio was alleviated somewhat.

Students could park at off-campus locations and ride the Johnson City Transit to ETSU. Approximately eighty cars took up the offer on peak days. In addition, carpooling continued. Together, the Transit and carpooling userhip increased fifty percent in September.

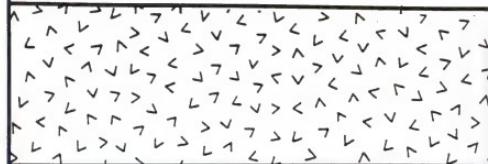

Administration discussed creating a new parking lot between Greenwood Drive and State of Franklin Road which could hold 1,000 vehicles on a park and ride basis.

"This is an inherit problem on many or most campuses," said Vice President for Student Affairs Dorman Stout.

"Every student feels that they should have their own set of wheels. Habits are hard to change."

"We've never told students not to drive their cars, and in my opinion, it would be highly impractical." I | I Dennis D. Brooks

Celebrate hope

September 15 was a night, for many cancer patients, that will be remembered for a long time. Actress/singer Ann Jillian, "Jennifer Slept Here" and "It's a Living" star, was the guest lecturer at ETSU in conjunction with the opening of the $3 million Cancer Treatment Center at Johnson City Medical Center Hospital. Ms. Jillian was asked to speak after dealing with breast cancer in 1985. She found the cancer through self-breast examination, SBE, and emphasized the importance of every female learning and practicing this procedure.

Since finding the cancer, Ms. Jillian stated that it effected her life by changing her outlook on life, her relationship with her husband, and giving a new prospective in her career. Her new outlook on life, as she explained it, was like taking pictures and shooting close-up shots instead of trying to get the whole scape. Her relationship with her husband was strengthened by this event. She felt that there was nothing that the two of them could not go through.

Ms. Jillian's career was not put on hold during this time; instead she used it, and chemotherapy, for a quick recovery. During this time, Ms. Jillian was filming an Alice in Wonderland movie and did not want the director to replace her. Another movie that she starred in after this event was "The Life of Ann Jillian." She stated that she did this movie to educate the public on breast cancer and also to signify the slowing down of her nationwide tour of lectures on breast cancer and her life.

"I'm here to try and instill some hope and celebrate with all of you this wonderful victory that you have made with the cancer center."!!!

Better late than never

Why did people come back to school after twenty, thirty, or even forty years? Many adult students said that they wanted to do something better with themselves.

The job market drastically changed in the past ten years, also. Most adults who attended school ten years ago were not even introduced to computers. Today, however, computers are utilized in most fields of occupation.

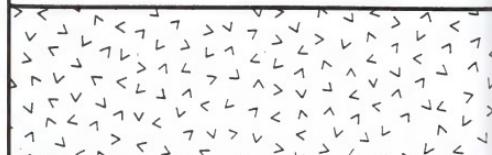

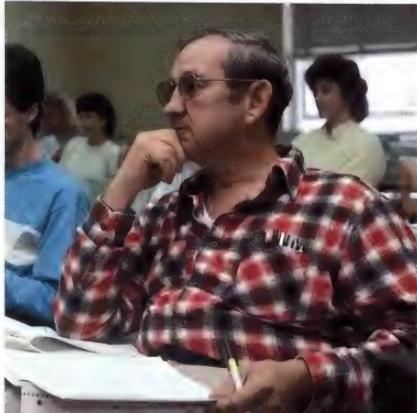

Some families only needed one parent working then. Now, it is almost always necessary for both parents to have a job. Many people have found that it is not easy to get a job without a degree in a particular field.

The Center for Adult Programs and Services was designed to make the decision to begin or to return to school an easier one. And once the decision had been made, the center's staff made the transition smoother.

Adult students found counselors, advisers, and people to help with scheduling, paying fees, and automobile registering in one location.

Get back!

No matter what school or state a student was from, each one soon learned Buccaneer Homecoming was more than one football game. It was a combination of events designed to motivate students and inspire school spirit.

Opening with the Monday morning Proclamation Ceremony, school spirit, as well as group competitiveness, began to soar. Organizations of all sorts hoped to gain an early lead over their rivals.

Skit Night, which took place on Tuesday, saw a total of sixteen organizations represented. Students packed the auditorium to watch both the skits and the lively comedy of Edward Jackman. Jackman brought not only a bag full of jokes, but a pocket full of tricks. He jugged everything from boxes, to pins, to swords, to bowling balls. Fast-paced comedy and juggling kept the crowd motivated and the night moving.

Skits involved dating as well as singing and dancing. They had a sixties feel, and the theme, "Get Back to the Blue and Gold," was abound.

After three hours of performances, the winners were announced. In the individual organizations division, Alpha Sigma Iota took first place with their recreation of the "Freedom Rock" album commercial. Their "performers" included Jimmy Hendrix, Jim Morris, The Supremes, and John Lennon. Phi Mu Alpha and Delta Omicron followed in second, and Black Affairs took third.

In the residence hall division, the singing and dancing of Powell and McCord Halls took first place. They were followed by Carter Hall in second and Stone Hall and Davis Apartments in third.

Finally, the Greek division saw intense competition, but in the end the winners were Sigma (continued on page 28)

Kappa and Lambda Chi Alpha. Their rendition of a "Family Ties" episode earned them top honors. Second in the Greek division was Kappa Delta and Phi Kappa Alpha, followed by Phi Mu and Sigma Chi in third.

Most skits were filled with dancing and singing, but one group took a very solemn approach. SNEHA presented a tribute to the Vietnam Veterans of the 60's era, and they ask students to take time to remember and say "thanks" to those people who served.

Skit night was not the only event of the week. Wednesday brought the Charity Carnival, with games and items for students to purchase, and the crowning of the new queen and court. The new queen, Molly Crisp, was to preside over the events left in the week. Her court of first, second, and third runners-up were Susan Lyon, Gina Humphries, and Kim McAllester, respectively. Following the coronation, the jazz singers performed for the crowd on hand.

As the end of the week drew nearer, preparation for the game with Marshall University intensified. A pep rally with fireworks and Army paparachutes highlighted Thursday's itinerary. A parade was also held on Friday.

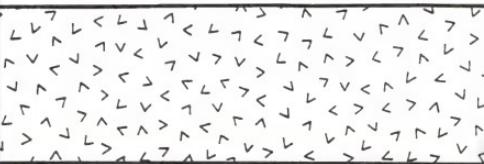

Other events of the week included banner designing, the "Olympic Games," and a lecture by former President Jimmy Carter.

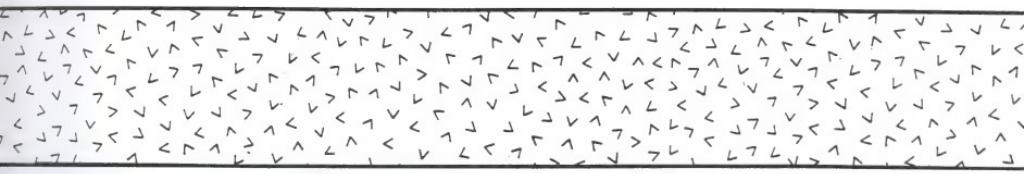

The highpoint of the week was the game against the Thundering Herd of Marshall. During halftime, the queen and her court were present, and the Outstanding Alumnists Award in the Arts was presented to Timothy Busfield. The actor most recently found fame in his role of Elliot on ABC's thirtysomething. Busfield returned to school the past three summers as an instructor in a theatre workshop for both college and high school students.

Also announced during halftime were the winners of homecoming competition. The first place winners were Alpha Sigma Iota in the individual, Carter Hall in the residence, and Kappa Delta and Phi Kappa Alpha in the Greek division.

Once the groups cleared the field, the game continued and found a disappointing end as the Bucs lost to Marshall.

Presidentially speaking

Former President of the United States Jimmy Carter participated in the Presidential Distinguished Lecture Series during Homecoming. He provided answers to students' questions prior to lecturing inside Memorial Center, after which he fielded additional questions from the general public.

During his term, Carter was instrumental in establishing peace between Egypt and Israel, negotiated the SALT II treaty and the Panama Canal treaties. He fought for human rights and environmental protection.

Carter also suffered through high inflation, high interest rates, high gas prices, Soviet grain embargo, a hostage crisis, and an Olympic boycott.

Nevertheless, he enjoyed his job.

"I never got up a single morning when I did not want to be in the Oval Office," he said.

"But sometimes I was disappointed when I got there."

Carter stated that one problem he had with his duties as President was carrying out the legality of abortions. He said he did not believe Jesus Christ would approve abortions, but his duty as President was to obey the laws of the Constitution, so he did.

He had much to say concerning the 1988 Presidential campaign, which was winding down to its last three weeks.

"This has been the most frivolous and non-substantial campaign I have ever witnessed," Carter said.

He stated that both candidates, George Bush and Michael Dukakis, had not rightly addressed issues such as education or the deficit, but had relied on character smearing.

He frequently attacked his successor, Ronald Reagan, on various issues, including the economic field, which he claimed was Reagan's biggest failure.

"Reagan has generated an unprecedented deficit in our country's budget," he said. Carter added that Reagan only wanted a balanced budget amendment "to make him balance the budget."

The former President offered advice to college students, saying, "(You should) not be afraid of failure. Set the highest possible goal in life and do not be embarrassed of failure." 111 Dennis Brooks and Susan Saylor

Discover the magic

The Carroll Reece Museum was one of the sources of magic in the history of this region.

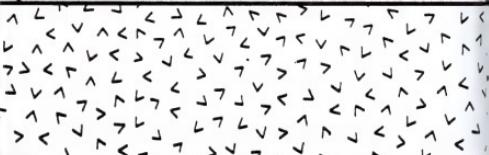

The museum acquired the exhibits this year from various sources, one being the University of Tennessee at Knoxville's College of Art and Architecture. Helen Roseberry, the director of the museum, stated that there were three reasons for the Knoxville exhibits, "First [the exhibits] are of very high quality. Second, they relate directly to our region, and third, they are affordable for the museum."

Student activity was encouraged by the museum more than ever this past year. English classes toured exhibits, in particular the Vietnam Wall Memorial photographs. While touring with her English class, Melissa Murray expressed that she "could actually feel the pain and loss the people were feeling in the photographs."

The exhibit that most students and area residents attended this past year was the Christmas exhibit. Area high school choral groups entertained during the annual tea as visitors strolled through the enchanted rooms of trees. An added feature was Cheryl Roseberry, a student majoring in Speech and Hearing Therapy, who volunteered her time to sing popular Christmas carols to the hearing impaired.

Unfortunately many students missed the inspiring exhibits, but there was always something new to discover in the magical past displayed at the Reece Museum. ||| Susan Saylor

Up, up, and away

Once again, the United States was back in the space race. With the blast-off of the shuttle Discovery in September, the space program was once again underway. Discovery's flight was the first since the January 1988 explosion of the shuttle Challenger.

After the four-day mission was completed, Discovery returned home to Edward's Air Force Base. The triumphant landing ended a 16 million-mile trip, and began a new era in U.S. space travel.

Blown away

In late September, much of the Caribbean, Central America, Mexico, and the United States fell prey to the fatal winds of hurricane Gilbert. Gilbert rose out of the Caribbean with nothing but destruction in mind. Before it finally lost its hurricane status in northeastern Mexico, it had killed more than 300 people. It also left hundreds of thousands homeless and caused billions of dollars of damage. Relief efforts were soon organized to assist Gilbert's victims.

Covering a nation

With great effort and many tears, thousands of people worked to assemble a 375,000 square foot quilt memorializing the deaths of AIDS victims. Panels measuring three feet by six feet were joined to form the quilt. All fifty states and a dozen foreign countries were represented. The quilt was displayed in October in Washington D.C.

No more nukes

The efforts of President Ronald Reagan and Soviet Leader Mikhail S. Gorbachov were finally realized in 1988. With the signing of a peace treaty that would eliminate certain nuclear weapons, the attempts by the two leaders to bring the countries peacefully together were materializing. This was accomplished during Reagan's last year in office.

Up in flames

With the drought affecting most of the country in summer of 1988, forest fires began to run rampant. The western part of the country was soon scorched by the blazing flames. Left behind was a long trail of bare land and ash. Yellowstone National Park was heavily damaged. Thousands of acres of timber were destroyed.

The ones that got away

Alaska was not well known for its fishing, but in December many Russians and Americans gathered together to free two very large sea creatures. Two California Grey Whales became entrapped in ice off the coast of the small village of

Seoul or bust

The 1988 Summer Olympics were held in Seoul, South Korea. The games opened with a dazzling ceremony lasting three hours. The 16 days of events were tarnished when gold-medal winner Ben Johnson was disqualified. The Canadian runner was found to have traces of an anabolic steroid in his body.

Beauty and the beast

It was one of the most publicized and most controversial marriages of the year. The attention was not focused on wedding bliss, but rather marital bouts. The marriage of heavyweight boxer Mike Tyson to actress Robin Givens was short-lived and long-winded. After being married less than one year, the beautiful Givens filed for divorce from her rich husband. Givens was accused of marrying "Iron Mike" only for his money. Her response was that she would not take a dime. The battle did not end until late February with a winner undeclared.

One more Buc fan

Displaying a little school spirit, candidate for Vice President Dan Quayle shows off his Buccaneer sweat shirt. The Republican rally held in Brook's Gym was host to 5,500 spectators.

Even though Quayle was on Democrat Albert Gore's home soil, he was well received by most. The highly spirited crowd displayed banners and signs showing support.

And the winner is . . .

After eight years in the Ronald Reagan administration, Vice President George Bush received the Republican Presidential nomination during the summer convention. Though Bush's nomination was expected, his choice of a running mate was not. Senator Dan Quayle of Indiana was his choice. The forty-one-year-old was relatively inexperienced and not a popular choice with the public.

Joys of toys

Christmas is a special time for all, but if there are no toys for the children then it could be very sad. That was why the Marine Corps began Toys for Tots. ETSU also wanted to lend a hand. Through December 15, toys were collected on campus for the cause. Cooperation of the community with the Marines helped once again make the effort successful.

Sign of spirit

Some students on campus decided to let their cars do the talking. They displayed the specially designed ETSU license plates. The 1989 design featured the blue logo on the left side and three digits in gold on the right side. The state abbreviation was in gold and the county name in blue. Proceeds from the sale of the tags went to the Tennessee Arts Commission. The license plates were a good way to show school spirit and school pride for students and faculty.

Project: Hope

As a special guest at the September 15 dedication of the Johnson City Medical Center Hospital's Cancer Treatment Center, actress Ann Jillian provided hope and inspiration for other cancer victims. In 1985 she battled the disease and won. More than three million dollars of private funds was raised for the treatment center.

In the name of . . .

On Friday August 26, Building 1 at the Quillen-Dishner College of Medicine was named in honor of Johnson City Carl A. Jones. Jones was president and publisher of the Johnson City Press as well as other local newspapers. The public was invited to the 11:00 am ceremony. Distinguished guests included U.S. Senator James R. Sasser, U.S. Representative James H. Quillen, and other area legislators.

A little in return

Emmy-nominated actor and ETSU alumnus Timothy Busfield conducted a weekend drama workshop for the members of the theater department. Busfield attended ETSU from 1978-1980. He was nominated for an Emmy Award as Best Supporting Actor for his role as Elliot in ABC's thirty-something. The workshop was to prepare students for auditions for the Tennessee Theater Association.

Highly inspired

What would have inspired busy college girls to give up hours and hours of their spare free time? Could it have been the possibility of academic success, or perhaps the chance to demonstrate athletic prowess? These were logical reasons, but the inspiration for seventeen young ladies was the opportunity to become Miss Buccaneer 1988-89.

These ladies spent hours practicing for November 4 — the night for them to shine. Practice began in early September and was completed the night before the pageant. All girls also competed in the preliminary competition held on Tuesday, November 1.

Areas of competition included sportswear, swimwear, evening gown, and interview. After the field was narrowed to ten, preliminary scores were dropped, and each contestant began with a clean slate except for their interview scores.

Damaris Ruetz, Miss Buccaneer 1987-88, was on hand to perform for the crowd and to help with the coronation of the successor. Other entertainment was provided by Debbie Pierson, former Miss Buccaneer, and Tim Heath.

The pageant, sponsored by the Buccaneer Yearbook Staff, drew to a close with the announcement of the winners. The new Miss Buccaneer was Karen Gray and her court was as follows: first runner-up Benita Bellamy, second runner-up Lisa Brooks, third runner-up Melissa Carr, and fourth runner-up Amanda Mullins. Miss Congeniality, who was voted on by the contestants, was Benita Bellamy.

After the trophies were awarded and the stage was cleared, Miss Gray assumed her new role as Miss Buccaneer. Again the preparation for next year's pageant was underway as her title began its fleeting existence. ||| Lorie Warren

On the move

Over three years of hard work were finally realized when the family of WETS public radio found a home at their newly completed station located across from the Buccaneer Village apartments. The station was available for occupancy in October and cost approximately $235,000. A fundraising event which spanned three years provided more than $200,000 from the listeners of the station. The rest of the funds came from ETSU and a federal grant which totaled $28,000.

The new station format contained mostly classical, jazz, folk, and bluegrass. "Since we are a public radio station, we try to make available music that the public wants to hear but can't find on commercial radio," commented Mr. Ellis.

WETS was an FM station exerting a signal which could be heard for over 100 miles. The new tower emitted a clearer signal because of a second microwave dish which was installed.

The station's announcers were students who operated the facility eighteen hours a day. |||

Beginning the transition from old station to new, announcer Matthew Clark carries boxes of records to an awaiting truck.

Proudly displaying the new station is Dick Ellis. Mr. Ellis was host of the morning show on WJCW, a local country music station and also station manager for WETS.

On the job for WETS is announcer Louise Vahle.

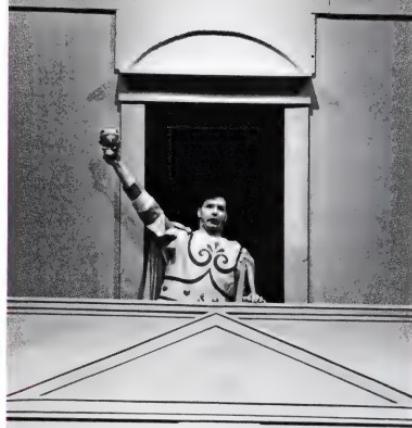

Present to take part in the opening day ceremonies are Doug Bennett, president of the National Public Radio Association, Dr. Ronald E. Beller, president of the university, Mrs. Judith Beller, and an NPR representative. (See facing page.)

Officially opening the station with a ribbon cutting ceremony are Wayne Winkler, President Beller, Doug Bennett, and Judy Hillard.

Together again

Classic comedy combined with a classic team proved to be successful for the university's Division of Theater. The production of "A Funny Thing Happened On The Way To The Forum" was different from the other productions of recent years. It was a joint venture of the Theater Department and the Johnson City Community Theater, the first one in over 25 years.

The last joint production took place in 1964. Then, the play was "The Miracle Worker." Now, the stage was set for intense comedy rather than intense drama.

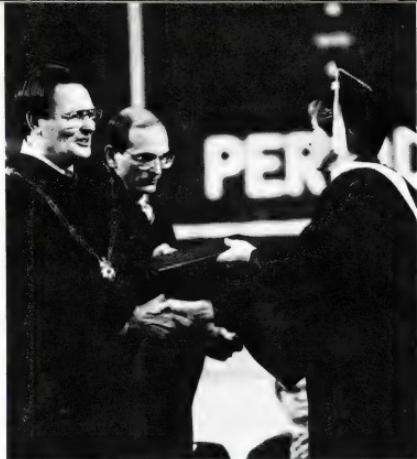

Directed by JCCT player Bill Counts, the "Forum" was one of the few big musicals the J.C. Theater had not done.

William B. Campbell was the only member of the cast which had performed in both joint productions. Bill Livesay played Pseudolus, the lead character. He conducted most of the action on stage.

With the combined talents of all JCCT players and the theater students, well over 100 years of talent was presented to the audience.

The "Forum" opened Wednesday, November 30, and ran for two weeks. According to Counts, "Forum" was not "a standard musical comedy. Part of it was classic Stephen Sondheim. Part of it was a parody on big musicals."

Regardless of the type of play performed, the two groups seemed to have found a wonderful combination. ||| Lorie Warren

Final farewell

Brought together for a common reason, students and their families gathered in the Mini Dome to celebrate one end and one beginning. The end of years and years of hard work was to be tested as the students began their new lives. These were lives filled with careers instead of school.

Fall commencement was held at 10 a.m. on December 17. More than 800 students were present to receive degrees ranging from associate to doctor of medicine and doctor of education.

The ceremony was preceded by breakfast for graduates and their families in the D.P. Culp Center ballroom.

The commencement speaker, U.S. Representative Bob Clement of the 5th District of Tennessee, was introduced by Judge Hugh E. DeLozier Jr. Judge DeLozier was a 1963 alumnus.

After the degrees had been handed out and congratulations shared, the real test for the graduates began. What the future held for them was based on the paper in their hands and the determination and education backing it. ||| Lorie Warren

A well-deserved "Congratulations" is given by President Ronald E. Beller. More than 800 degrees were presented including 311 that went to summer graduates.

Ushering in faculty members, Thomas Huang served as mace bearer for the commencement ceremony.

Graduates await their turn to receive their degree from Dr. Beller.

As the processional exits the Mini Dome, graduates share a smile and a sigh of relief.

Dolls anyone?

"Dolls, dolls, dolls" was the theme for the Christmas Tree exhibit at the Carroll Reece Museum. The exhibit ran from November 28 until December 18.

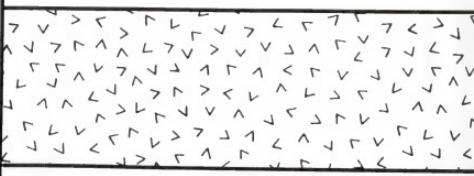

Dolls for every occasion were found on display. No matter what a person's favorite doll was, it could be found at the Carroll Reece Museum.

Gone With the Wind fans admired their favorite characters such as Scarlett, Rhett, Melanie, or Ashley. Also, those people interested in rock music could find a Michael Jackson doll. Presidential dolls were contained on several shelves. There were dolls were some Presidents' wives. Along with the very old dolls, one could find contemporary dolls such as the Cabbage Patch collection within the museum.

Besides dolls, one could view Christmas trees which were decorated by different groups. Hand-made ornaments adorned many of the trees. One of the main attractions was that of the poinsettia tree. The poinsettia tree was provided by Friends of the Museum.

Within the walls of the museum, different cultures blended to become a part of the personality of the university. ||| Julie Arrowood

Many dolls were featured. There were handmade dolls, porcelain dolls, and dolls representing different cultures. Here, some stuffed animals accompany the dolls on the piano.

One hundred voices

The one-hundred voice University Choir performed a variety of sacred music at their annual Christmas concert. As in years past, the concert was held in First Presbyterian and Munsey Memorial United Methodist Churches. The University Choir performed as a whole before splitting up into the Men's Ensemble and the Women's Choir. Works included numbers by Handel, Beethoven, Bruckner, Verdi and Benjamin Britten. The concert then concluded with the ever-popular "O Holy Night."

Last February, the Men's Ensemble was selected to perform for the southern regional convention of the American Choral Directors Association in Winston-Salem, North Carolina. As a result of their performance, they were requested to make a recording of selected repertoire for male chorus to be played at this year's convention. With help from the ETSU Friends of Music, the ensemble made the professional recording to send to the convention. ||| Susan Saylor

Dorm sweet dorm

Dorm life was a way to introduce the "real" world to students. Independence and freedom were now a large part of life for the first time to many students. New friends were also a part of this adjustment.

This new independence meant deciding what time to come home, managing time wisely, and the management of money as well. There was also the decision of which roommate to live with, which dorm to live in, and what kind of soft drinks to stock up on.

Roommates had to share many of these decisions. If roommates were just put together, it was more important to cooperate and share decisions to get along.

Having to provide their own meals was also a new experience for many residents. The answer to this dilemma was the efficient microwave. If not for the microwave, many students would starve, or go broke at fast food restaurants. ||| Paula McDaniel

To many students it was a struggle to get access to a typewriter. After that, it was sometimes a struggle to type.

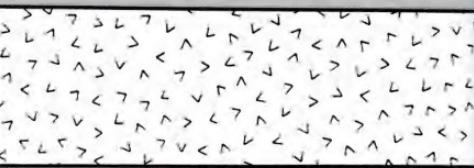

It was often hard to find a time to study in the dorms. An hour of peace was seldom found.

A lot of students tried to have fun with moving in. Others saw no joy involved. (See facing page.)

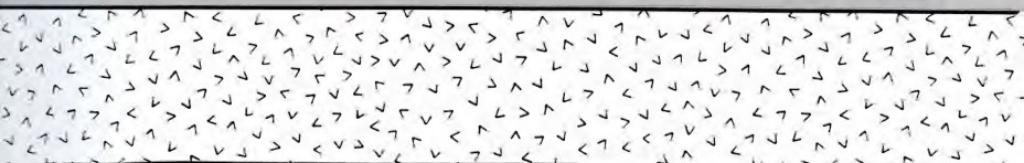

The microwave was the rescue to much of the hunger of the students. If not for the microwave many students felt they would starve. (See facing page.)

Talking on the phone was a typical pastime for students living in the dorm. The phone was one basic necessity. (See facing page.)

With a touch of humor, Benita Bellamy plays a medley of her favorite classical compositions.

A dramatic reading about death and loneliness was chosen by Ginger Fountain to present as her talent. Ginger was a senior communications major.

First runner-up Robin Whitehead was a member of Alpha Delta Pi sorority, the Baptist Student Union, and the Young Republicans.

Bright lights, glitter

Bright lights, glitter, and lots of sound were the backdrops for the 1989 Miss ETSU Pageant.

The annual scholarship pageant, sponsored by the Campus Activities Board, was one of the largest Miss America preliminary scholarship pageants in Tennessee.

Fred Sauceman, director of Alumni and University Relations, served as master of ceremonies while Miss ETSU 1988 Tammy Arnett assisted.

With the sound of the Charles Goodwin Trio in the background, contestants competed in swimsuit talent, and evening gown competitions.

For special entertainment, Tammy Arnett performed a solo and a duet with Jazz Singer Tim Heath, and the men's ensemble from the Jazz Singers serenaded the audience with a medley of "Lullaby of Broadway" and "Goodnight Baby" and with "Silhouettes."

Voted Miss Congeniality, Carol Ann Ray was a sophomore nursing major. During the talent competition she performed a contemporary dance routine.

Benita Bellamy, a sophomore business management major, placed second. Her talent was playing a piano medley of her classical favorites.

Robin Whitehead, sophomore philosophy major, was named first runner-up. She also performed on the piano during the talent segment.

A junior communications major, Whitney Greene was selected to reign as the 1989 Miss ETSU. Whitney sang a vocal selection for her talent. As the winner, she received $1,000 in tuition and fees for one year at ETSU, a meal plan, and textbooks for two semesters.

The competition ended months of preparation and a week of practices, interviews, and more practices. A panel of five judges selected the winners from a field of eight contestants. ||| Sarah Jamerson

All that jazz

Since 1979, a special group of performers has graced the campus and Northeast Tennessee with music. Under the direction of Dr. Thomas Jernette, the group flourished.

The ETSU Jazz Singers this past year consisted of fourteen singers and a rhythm section of three talented musicians. They performed both on and off campus during the year. Off campus, they entertained at the fourth annual Taste of Johnson City and also in a televised Christmas program on WJHL-TV 11. On campus the men's ensemble of the Jazz Singers delighted the audience at the Miss ETSU pageant, and the entire group charmed the crowd at the Homecoming Carnival.

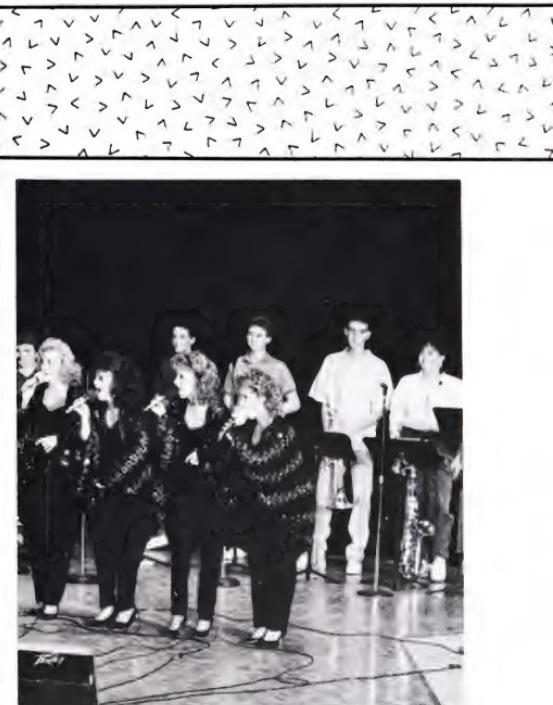

In March, the group traveled to Louisville, Kentucky to perform for the national convention of the American Choral Directors Association. The ETSU Jazz Singers were requested to present a one-hour concert for others performing at the convention. They were the only college or university ensemble from Tennessee to perform at the convention.

"The group's selection was based on audio and video tapes submitted last spring," according to Dr. Jenrette, "and this is the first time an ETSU choral ensemble has been so honored." | | | Susan Saylor Delighting the audience with a powerful performance are S. Self, J. Gray, S. Branson, and D. McCann.

Providing a crowd-pleasing performance are H. Harris, S. Branson, T. Arnett, S. Self, T. Arwood, and D. McCann.

Emotion shows on the face of Tuesday Arwood as she sings her heart out to Scott Self during a performance.

Getting down to the business of singing, C. Cross, K. Smith, T. Arwood, and D. Graybeal put on a powerful performance.

Socially speaking

The decisions of a lifetime were made in these "molding years." However, these decisions could not be made hastily, or with a heavy heart and mind. That was why behind every tiring hour of deep contemplation over the functions of an algebraic equation or the consideration of Marx's view of the capitalistic world, there needed to be time devoted to the advancement of the social being and some good old-fashioned fun.

Although the studying part of college life required a little self-effort, parental persuasion, and sometimes tutoring, many students found that recreation and relaxation came with ease.

Whether a student spent time at the Culp Center, or ordered Domino's from a friend's dorm room, the campus offered some diversity for student activities. Besides the game room and restaurants in the Culp Center, there were activities at Brooks Gym, such as aerobics for the health conscience. There were also exhibits at the art building and the Carroll Reece Museum.

But, if the campus scene was not quite one's "cup of tea," Johnson City had something to offer.

To begin, there was the "strip," which was home to not only Micky D's and Colonel Sanders, but also to Poor Richard's Deli. Poor Richard's was definitely a popular hub of activity, especially for Monday Night Football.

But, if the kick-off had just been missed, why not shop? If Johnson City's own Mall did not present an adequate shopping choice, there were shopping centers everywhere. Whether the Roan Center, the Peerless Center, or the Colonial Center, there was a shop for everyone and everything. There was also a store for every pocketbook. Whether K-Mart, Parks Belk, or Massengills, a varied taste and price could be found for all.

However, if shopping wasn't "in the blood," why not catch a movie? With three different theatres in Johnson City alone, students had fourteen or more movies from which to choose every night.

For the sports enthusiast, a golf course was situated beside the campus. There were also baseball and football fields scattered throughout the area. Swimming, tennis, racquetball, horseback riding, and more were found within a few minutes from campus.

No matter what the interest of the student, there was something somewhere to keep them busy, even if it was the party in the room down the hall. ||| Lorie Warren

Get SAC'ed

With over 150 registered organizations on campus to provide services for, year-round activities to coordinate, and monthly newsletters to publish, the Student Activities Center was an office constantly in motion.

SAC provided office space for a few of the organizations, and tickets for ballgames and certain campus events were sold at the office. SAC's semester-long calendars aided groups in planning events.

Sponsoring workshops was also a responsibility of SAC. "How to Organize a Successful Fundraiser" was held after Homecoming had depleted many treasures. Herald as "The Big Event," the Annual Leadership Conference was held in February for organizations electing new officers. Inter-Greek Relations, Image Building and Public Relations, and Time Management were topics covered in the workshop.

Under the umbrella of SAC, Volunteer ETSU worked with 43 Johnson City agencies to provide individuals and groups with opportunities to log in Volunteer hours. Blood drives, a United Way Charity Carnival, Special Olympics, AIDS Hotline, adoption of an elderly person, Salvation Army Christmas Food Drive, and the Child Abuse Center were some of the opportunities.

During the 1987-88 school year, Volunteer ETSU students and organizations logged in over 10,000 hours of service.

Director of the Student Activities Center, Debbie Craig was an overseer and coordinator of the SAC office. A familiar face to many, Ms. Craig offered information and advice to the many campus organizations and provided many opportunities for groups to "get SAC'ed." ||| Sarah Jamerison

ACADEMICS

From returning students with years of experience to first-semester freshmen, students came with a variety of educational backgrounds and needs. The university was prepared to offer courses, seminars, and lectures to challenge the minds of the gifted or to help develop good study habits for those who found school more difficult. No matter what capabilities a student possessed, classes, labs, and activities of interest were provided by the university. — Sarah Jamerson

The courses concentrated primarily on conversation, although lessons on the Chinese writing characters, culture, and history were also taught.

The Kaldegg lectureship was established by Muriel and Victor Zager of Bristol in the memory of Erna P. Kaldegg, an sociology professor. Its purpose was to present distinguished speakers addressing the meaning and value of reli-Stamp's lecture was sponsored by the College of Arts and Science and the Office of the Vice President for Academic Affairs.

Expanding for tomorrow's future

Expanding with the time and technology, the College of Business extended the availability of computers to all the areas of business. Along with the increase of computer programs offered, the College of Business provided new classes. The College of Business offered options in corporate finance and investments, and banking and real estate were added to the undergraduate finance major. The undergraduate economics major was bolstered by the addition of options in business economics and general business and economics.

New levels of support for the college were evidenced by full funding of the AFG Industries Chair of Excellence in Business and the establishment in May of the Allen and Ruth Harris Chair of Excellence in Business. The AFG Industries Chair of Excellence in Business and Technology became a reality upon receipt of a naming contribution from the AFG Industries of Kingsport.

Funding was obtained for a new chair, the Allen and Ruth Harris Chair of Excellence in Business. A naming amount of money from the Harrises was combined with university and state funding to create a total endowment of $1,250,000. Income supported a major scholar in the field of business.

The college continued to meet the specialized needs of adult and part-time students who desired evening and off-campus instructions. To accommodate the schedules of such students, late afternoon and evening classes were expanded at both the main campus and the Kingsport University Center. ■■■

Learning to teach

The 1988-1989 academic year was considered a good one in the College of Education. Although accomplishments were diversified, every department experienced growth and development, according to Dr. Floyd Edwards, Associate Dean, College of Education.

A major project in mathematics education, which was funded by the National Science Foundation, was completed and resulted in significant improvement in teaching mathematics in area school systems. An innovative program for the preparation of school principals was initiated involving the collaboration of local school systems in Northeast Tennessee and funding from the Danforth Foundation. A program began in 1987, Leadership in Educational Administration and Development (LEAD) was expanded to include additional schools and principals in 1988-1989. Efforts were expanded to obtain external funding and a major project in science education was funded by the National Science Foundation.

As a follow-up to establishing a teacher center at University School in 1987-1988, a second center for placement of student teachers was in the University service area in 1988-1989. A plan to provide a stipend to cooperating teachers who worked with student teachers in their schools was begun this year. A collaborative program with the University of Tennessee and Milligan College for developing a model, paid, year-long teaching internship program was begun in local school systems. The College of Education worked with the College of Arts and Sciences to develop interdisciplinary majors for elementary education students.

The College hosted a conference for Science supervisors which attracted participants from all over the United States, including Alaska. A THEC-funded program in science education involved 25 science teachers from Northeastern Tennessee. The third annual Special Education conference and an Early Childhood workshop attracted over 500 school personnel and other interested participants to the ETSU campus. Sponsorship of the fourth annual ETSU-MENSA Saturday Enrichment Program offered five seminars for 25 junior and senior high school students. Seminar topics included Forensic Criminology, Advance Forensic Criminology, Infections Diseases and Parasites, Astronomy and An Introduction to Law. !!!

These two students recorded their result for their assignments with the help from the computer.

This artist knew that silk-screening was a hard and slow process, but the product was worth the time and patience.

After adjusting his instrument, an electronics student was able to read the measurement.

Craftmen's wood-lathe techniques were not forgotten. This student turned a square block of wood into a cylinder.

Learning again

A new School of Continuing Studies was approved for East Tennessee State University by the Board of Regents of the State University and Community College System of Tennessee. It brought together a variety of credit and noncredit programs that reported individually to the vice president for academics affairs.

According to Paul Fendt, dean of the school, "The purpose of the reorganization is to allow ETSU to broaden its commitment and range of educational services to older and non-traditional students." Fendt added that the university views professional development as an area of growth for the school. "Employers are expressing great interest in professional development opportunities, so we are changing the focus of our continuing education program to reflect a stronger emphasis in that regard." |||

After nightfall, a student rushes to his class. He was not unlike many others who took night classes.

Two continuing studies students found time to study.

Healthy History

When the school of Public and Allied Health was established in 1959-60, its objectives were to provide health programs to prepare students for careers in medical oriented and health care programs in the surrounding regions. Since its establishment, the college has met its on-going goal for the university.

The Speech and Hearing Clinic offered professional services in the areas of language, speech, and hearing for individual of all ages. The school also offered a on-campus dental clinic in case of any emergencies for students, and blood pressure screening was available on campus at Lamb's Hall. !!!

As assembled the parts of this model, this student discovered how the human body functioned.

Using the microscope for observation, a student could find interesting facts of the "microworld" of animals.

A Bristol student practices plastering another student's arm at a workshop which was held in early fall.

Checking a patient's eye, a medical student is observed by Dr. Barbara Kimbrough.

Medicine at arms

Early this year in cooperation with the Holston Valley Hospital and its medical center, the College of Medicine opened its level I trauma center. The center received full designation as a level I trauma center for the East Tennessee region by the State Licensing Board in June. As one of five such centers, this unit provided an around-the-clock comprehensive service for severely injured patients in the eastern area of Tennessee and the surrounding areas of Kentucky, Virginia, and North Carolina.

One of the country's foremost authorities on AIDS, Dr. Merle A. Sande, was the speaker for the 11th annual Thomas W. Green Memorial Lecture. Co-sponsored annually by Beecham Laboratories, and the Quillen-Disher College of Medicine, the lecture focused on the AIDS epidemic as an area of vital importance to the public as well as the medical community.

Working with the Johnson City Medical Center Hospital, the College of Medicine finished a program in the field of cardiac and thoracic surgery. This program complemented the services offered by the cardiac catheter laboratory previously established through the college and the hospital. // Ken Burchett

Added options

The Nave Paramedical Center in Elizabethton was a branch of the medical colleges. The purpose of the center was to allow students who were unable to attend classes on campus to attend classes there. The Center also gave more options when students were scheduling their classes.

The center offered medical degrees in radiologic technology, medical assistant, dental laboratory technology, and medical laboratory technician. It also offered certificate programs for a dental assistant, for a surgical technologist, and for a respiratory therapy technician. !!!

This student learned how to prepare and make fillings in one of the dental classes that was offered.

As the Elizabethton branch of the college, the Nave Paramedical Center served students interested in the medical field.

Aftering mixing this substance, this student made a few tests.

The medical student prepared his patient for x-rays.

This Nave student made a model of the shape of someone's jaw.

These two students helped each other to prepare for their next class.

While waiting for her class to start, this student studied once more before her test.

Same but different

For the people who were unable to travel and attend classes on the main campus in Johnson City, a division of the college was placed in Kingsport. This center contained similar courses and was a better location for many commuting students of the western part of Sullivan County. Students found that the center was not as different from the main campus as they thought it would have been. They noticed that the faculty and students were not any different from other students, and the classes were taught almost the same as those in Johnson City. /// Ken Burchett

The sign in front of the center showed the attitude of the center toward its visitors.

Andrew Hemond

In the quiet areas of the library, students are able to study better with each other.

There are many different kinds of information at the library. This student used this to his advantage.

Learning resources

The Sherrod library was a "landmark" for new visitors on campus, freshmen thought of the library as a huge mystery which they would never solve, and to upperclassmen, the library appeared to be a great treasure. Term papers, essays, research papers, and report after report were done using the resources of the library. Literature, both for pleasure and required, were read.

Periodically new books and other aids of learning were added to the library. The computer system included Info-trac, on-line research, and the inter-exchange loan that allow students to borrow books and other materials from different libraries. Not only did the building house over 500,000 books and magazines, but a large collection of federal and state documents, maps, archives, and special collections were also available at this one location.

Ken Burchett

Students gather together to work and compare their assignments.

Andrew Herndon

The best place to study and to prepare notes for any paper was the library.

A helping hand

For those students who were unable to easily grasp the foundation of their course, tutors were available to help them. Many people took some time out of their day to help these students who needed advice or help with a particular subject.

Students and tutors met at their own time and place although most of the meetings took place in the Culp Center during the daytime.

Math labs and writing labs were set up by the Office of Student Support Services. This office was concerned with motivating students to understand and remember course work as well as counseling students about academics.

Most students thought that the tutoring labs had helped them in their classes. // Ken Burchett

PEOPLE

Having some extra time often allowed students to visit the library for some quiet study time or a chance to stop by the Culp Center for a moment of relaxation.

People of the university were quite diverse. They were diverse in such ways as religious belief, academic standing, economic standing, social status, moral upbringing, and everyday attire. These differences were often integrated among students and faculty. Thus, new personalities were developed and created the atmosphere found on the campus of the university. ||| Julie Arrowood

Making new friends and finding old acquaintances were all a part of campus life. These people are catching up on the latest events in each others lives.

Many activities are enjoyed on campus life although sitting on the intramurals field playing with a puppy would not likely be found listed in the catalog.

Facial expressions often reveal how a person feels or what the person is thinking about a particular situation.

Third period classes were shortened so that students could attend the Proclamation Ceremony. President Beller and Governor McWherter officially declared Homecoming.

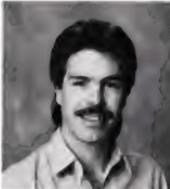

Places to study were abundant. One could find students studying in unlikely places such as their cars, while sitting on the benches at Gilbreth Hall, or, like this young lady, at the Amphitheater.

It was hard for one to walk on campus without meeting friends. Groups of people talking were a frequent sight on campus.

Dr. Ronald E. Beller has successfully guided ETSU since 1981. President Beller supervised all of the operations pertaining to the University.

A period of great expansion occurred during his administration.

The focus of becoming international in scope was evident with the signing of an exchange student agreement between East Tennessee State University and North China University of Technology.

In the fall of 1988, with Beller's leadership, ETSU achieved its highest enrollment in eleven years, reaching over 11,000 students.

It has been proven that with the guidance of President Beller, ETSU has significantly improved.

SPORTS

Former ETSU golf All-American Mike Hulbert tees off at the second annual Coca-Cola Wendy's Classic Pro-Am. Hulbert, a touring pro, shot a 68 at the fundraiser.

Athletes of the various sporting events came wearing fashions befitting their particular sport. Football players wore numbered jerseys and cleats, while basketball players were bedecked in shorts, tank tops, and high-top tennis shoes. But the athletes of all the sport activities were sure to be seen sporting the school colors of royal blue and old gold. ||| Julie Arrowood

Taking part in a intramurals game, this student fires a softball from out-field.

At a game on the home field, this baseball player prepares to catch a fly ball.

Sophomore quarterback Randy Meredith readies to fire a pass against Appalachian State. Meredith completed seven of fourteen passes, gaining fifty-six yards against the Mountaineers.

Daniel Jersey

Tailback George Searcy finds open territory in the Appalachian State defense. Searcy totaled 76 rushing yards against the Mountaineers, but his teammates could only add three more, losing 51-3.

With three returning players and four freshmen, the women's tennis team hoped to reverse last year's record of 10-15.

Women had their chance at playing football during a game at the intramural field.

Pirate team pounded because of those Pitching woes

"We had a few dingers hit off of us," said Coach Harold Stout.

Quite a few, in fact. Buccaneer opponents drove 79 pitches out of the park during the 1988 season, leaving the Bucs with 16 wins and 35 losses.

Pitching was a major concern for Coach Stout, and he learned that early when the Bucs traveled to the University of Tennessee to receive a 31-6 spanking.

And it never really eased up. By the season's end, the ETSU moundsmen, who included five freshmen, had a 9.54 earned run average. The best ERA any Buc pitcher could muster was Steve Meredith's 4.76 figure, but he only pitched in three games. The next best ERA to that was posted by Doug Campbell, yet 7.58 wasn't exactly exceptional.

At the plate, the Bucs fared a bit better. Meredith stroked a .419 average on 70 hits. Jeff Morgan led the team with a .630 slugging percentage and 11 homeruns.

Meredith and Morgan were not the only hitters on the team. Will Edwards hit for a .360 batting average and hit eight round-trippers. Steve Masterson added a .613 slugging percentage and 10 homers to establish an effective nucleus to produce runs.

Thanks to the pitching, though, that nucleus found it difficult to pull out victories.

After starting 2-5, the Buccaneers dropped 14 consecutive games. Six of those losses were to NAIA teams.

The Bucs reversed their slide somewhat when they swept a doubleheader versus Marshall and won five of seven games in the Sanford (Fla.) Tournament. ETSU ended with a 7-11 Southern Conference record. D. Brooks

Following the ball with his eyes, Scott Daniel makes contact with a pitch. Daniel hit .324 for the year.

Steve Masterson touches home plate, helping him total 48 during the year. The senior outfielder ended his Buc career with a .292 batting average.

In his first year as a Buccaneer, Jeff Sizemore led all Buc regular pitchers with a 4-0 record and a 7.58 ERA.

Looking for the umpire's call, Steve Meredith steals one of his 15 bases for the season against Tennessee in a 23-16 loss. The senior outfielder finished his collegiate career with a .413 batting average.

Dr. Harold Stout, in his fifth year of coaching the Bucs, goes through a trying season of 16 wins and 35 losses. That moved his 29-year career record to 544 wins and 397 losses.

Baseball wrap-up:

16 WINS
35 LOSSES

Firstbaseman Scott Daniel readies for the pitch. The senior posted a .972 fielding percentage in 49 games.

Junior Will Edwards goes back to the warning track for a fly ball. Edwards, in his third year as a starter, compiled a .376 batting average and pounded out 23 homeruns.

Total lack of athletes leave the Bucs Too few to conquer

They simply could not have done much more.

Both the men's and women's indoor and outdoor track and field teams had their big stars and stellar performances, but were short on everything else it would have taken to win the Southern Conference.

The men's team was led by its medium-long distance runners — Thomas O'Gara, Seamus Hynes, Ray Jones, and Scott Faulds. Too few people added to their scoring. In fact, Coach Dave Walker took only five men to the outdoor championship.

The Lady Bucs were equally short on people. Sabrina Keeton, Kim Frazer, Angie Barker, and Maelyn Thompson won events in the conference championships, but again, only a total of six women athletes traveled to the outdoor meet.

So why were both teams so lacking in personnel? For one, Coach Walker only had six scholarships to give, and it did not help him when football practice was held concurrently with the outdoor meet. The women's team was plagued with injuries, including a knee injury to Barker, the NCAA indoor shot put champion, who had to sit out of the outdoor meet.

Although they were indeed lacking athletes, both teams did get a lot out of what so little they had.

In the men's indoor mile run, ETSU placed in three of the first four finishers. O'Gara won with a time of 4:09.63. Hynes and Jones ended second and third, respectively. That same threesome finished 1-2-3 in the 3,000 meter run also. Scott Faulds joined the three to win the two-mile relay to round out the men's indoor victories.

It was much the same at the outdoor meet as O'Gara won the 5,000 and 10,000 meter runs. Hynes was runner-up in both races.

Others pitching in for the Buc effort included Stephen McDonald, who was third in the 110-meter outdoor high hurdles. Melvin Love placed second in the triple jump, and football player Albert Burt was fifth in the long jump to help ETSU in the indoor conference meet.

Aside from Barker's NCAA championship victory, other women did well themselves in the conference. Thompson finished second to Barker in the indoor and first in the outdoor shot put. Thompson added a second-place finish in the discus for good measure.

Keeton was champion in the indoor mile and the outdoor 800-meter run. She joined Joy Phelps, Jody Richards, and Frazer to pace the conference in the indoor two-mile relay. Frazer took first in the outdoor 400-meter hurdles to give ETSU one more SC champion.

||| Dennis D. Brooks

Angie Barker heaves the shot put 16.1 meters to outdistance her nearest competition by nearly four meters at the Southern Conference Indoor track Meet. Barker went on to win the event at the NCAA Championship.

Beaming with victory, Sabrina Keeton wins the mile run by a half-second with a time of 5:10.33 during the Southern Conference Indoor Track Meet. It was one of the two first-place finishes for Keeton at the meet.

With a Western Carolina runner not far behind, Kelly Gembach reaches for one last burst of energy that helped her finish sixth in the 400-meter run with a time of 1:02.99 at the Southern Conference Indoor Meet.

Scott Faulds shakes an opponent's hand at the Southern Conference Indoor Track Meet. Faulds represented one link in ETSU's two-mile relay team which finished first.

Stepping onto the starting block, Kim Frazer prepares to run in the Southern conference Indoor Track Meet. Frazer was first in the two-mile relay and second in the 800-meter run.

Ray Jones runs alongside a Marshall runner with Thomas O'Gara not far behind in the 3,000 meter run at the Southern Conference Indoor Track Meet. O'Gara won the event with a time of 8:26.13, and Jones finished third.

Buc runners dominate conference to be Back on top

It was just like old times.

After having lost the Southern Conference Championship the past two years, the 1988 cross country team regained the title it had owned for eight years.

To climb back to the top, Coach Dave Walker had to have one dominating runner to build the championship around. He most certainly had him.

Fresh from being red-shirted the previous season due to injury, Irishman Thomas O'Gara started his season great and never let up as he won his first five races and then qualified for the NCAA Championship, where he finished fourth. Not only did he win more than his share of meets, O'Gara set course records in each of his first three races.

With O'Gara leading the way, the rest of the Buc runners fell into place, despite a leg injury to Ray Jones, who placed eighth in the 1987 SC Championship, but limped to 59th place in the Bucs' conference victory.

John Erickson, Seamus Hynes, and Scott Faulds placed second, fourth, and sixth in the SC meet, respectively, comfortably placing ETSU ahead of its nearest competitor, Appalachian State.

Although the Buc runners wanted more than the Southern Conference title, it was all they got. They could only place sixth in the NCAA Championship. O'Gara finished sixth, which was good enough for individual qualifying. Hynes followed in 18th place, Erickson was 21st, Faulds finished 57th, and Jones, still injured, was 80th.

The Lady Buccaneer squad did little past going through the motions. After injuries and recruiting problems left the team rather lacking, all Coach Tom Roberts had was a group of sprinters and hurdlers, four of whom were freshmen. The ETSU women finished fifth of five teams in the conference meet with Kim Frazier leading the Lady Bucs in 23rd place. The Lady Buccaneer Volleyball team had another winning year. After capturing the Southern Conference title last year, the new coaching staff could only hope to reach that same goal again this year. "The road was definitely long and only eight home games did not help at all, but we pulled it off again by winning all eight home games," stated

Margie Brown, a junior setter.

"The new coaching staff was easier to adjust to than I had expected," explained team member Jill West. In order for this Southern Conference team to learn to relate to their new northern coaches, some of the players developed new names to Coach Kelly Andrews and Assistant Coach Betsy Collings.

"I really cannot remember who started it or where," commented Margie, "but someone decided that they needed southern names if they were going to coach in East Tennessee. So, Coach Andrews was dubbed Kelly Ellie Mae and Coach Collings somehow ended up with Betsy Daisy Mae. The names just seemed to appear from thin air."

Highpoints for this year's team included Pam Flinchum's appointment to the all-tournament team, and Kim Byrd once again achieved Southern Conference Player of the Year for the second year.

Preseason predictions make it no easier for Bucs in Pulling it off

They were out there.

"They" means preseason expectations. Good ones, predictions saying that the East Tennessee State Buccaneers would conquer the basketball world in 1988-89.

Before the season ever began, basketball magazines from both sides of the Mississippi were stating that ETSU would win the Southern Conference.

But head coach Les Robinson had reason to worry that his Bucs might not pull it off, at least not this year. Of his top seven players, four were sophomores, two were freshmen, and one was a junior. Before the 1988 SC tourney, none of Robinson's players had any playoff experience at all.

"It was really a lot of pressure on these guys," Robinson said of the expectations. "By mid-January, I could tell that these guys obviously weren't having fun."

The Bucs were 17-10 going into the conference tournament and had knocked off a couple of big schools in the process — Wake Forest and Mississippi State. But ETSU finished tied for fourth in the conference and were only 7-7 in SC play.

In the tournament, though, the Bucs had fun.

They downed The Citadel in the first round, 93-89, and upset first-seeded UT-Chattanooga in the semi-finals, 76-73.

In the championship game, ETSU dominated the Marshall Thundering Herd, winning their first trip to the NCAA Tournament in 21 years.

And that made up for the lack

6-11 center-forward Greg Dennis signals for the ball as he is guarded by an Appalachian State defender. Dennis, a sophomore, averaged 17.2 points per game. (See facing page.)

Point guard Mister Jennings dishes the ball off to a teammate. The 5-7 sophomore led the Southern Conference in assists for the second straight season in 1988-89.

Freshman Calvin Talford skies toward the goal for an easy two points. The 6-4 forward scored an average of 11.7 points a game.

Fans stand and cheer alongside the court inside Memorial Center. The Buccaneers consistently drew large crowds during the season, coming close to setting a single-season school record for attendance.

Men's basketball cont'd

of fun the Bucs had in January.

"This was our dream," Robinson said after the championship game. "Last year, we were like an NBA expansion team. We had no one with playoff experience on our roster."

"In two years time, this expansion team won the championship."

It was something which was not surprising, and besides the pre-season prognosticators, some of the tougher teams ETSU faced had some glittering opinions of the Buccaneers.

"When we played Southwest Missouri State and lost by just a couple of points, one of them was being interviewed for television, and said, 'That team's going to be good in a few years,'" Robinson said. "'And I don't mean good, I mean really good,' he said.

"I said to myself, 'Now this team (SW Missouri St.) has been there (NCAA Tournament) the last couple of years, and they should know what they are talking about.'

Robinson's 1987 recruiting class gave ample prelude to the Buc destiny. He recruited five players, two of which made their mark on the conference in just their freshmen years.

Keith "Mister" Jennings, a midget of a basketball player at 5-7, paced the SC in assists and steals in 1987-88, and did the same his sophomore season.

Greg Dennis, a 6-11 center, earned Southern Conference Freshman of the Year honors and followed that up with a 16.3 scoring average his sophomore year.

Junior 6-8 powerman Chad Keller provided bulk inside, as he scored 8.4 points a game in 1988-89.

Add to those three a couple of three-point threats in guards Alvin West and Major Geer, and a defensive specialist in Michael Woods, and the Bucs had plenty to work with during the year.

But wait, Robinson brought a couple more guys into the picture by doing a bit more recruiting the following year. He had already lured forward Marty Story from his football interests at Clemson, and he struck gold with a 6-4 forward from Castlewood, Virginia.

Calvin Talford had lettered in four sports while at Castlewood High School, and he had set state records in three track and field events. His athletic resume also included playing for the Martinsville Phillies, a rookie-league affiliate of the Philadelphia Phillies. While at Martinsville, he hit .375 in limited action.

He worked his way into the starting line-up for the Bucs and proceeded to average 11.7 points a game and became a crowd-pleaser as he scored whenever and however he wanted to as very few opponents could match his exceptional athletic ability.

Four Bucs were named to the conference all-tournament team. Talford, Jennings, Dennis, and West all made the first team. Surely no other team had placed four of its players on such a list of all-stars.

But with all of his key players returning for the next year, Robinson surely could have looked forward to the next year's predictions.

Because they would remain out there. 111 Dennis D. Brooks

ETSU's women basketball players were young, very young.

With a team of one senior, two juniors, five sophomores, and two freshmen, Lady Buccaneer head coach Debbie Richardson directed her team to a 8 wins and 18 losses overall and 2-10 in the Southern Conference.

After dropping four of their first five games, the Lady Bucs notched three victories in their next four games with wins over North Carolina-Char-

The conference slate was less than kind to ETSU, as the Lady Bucs could muster only two victories over Western Carolina.

*I*lumnus returns only to find conference foes giving A rather rude welcome back

It was Homecoming time for Don Riley.

After having been an assistant coach at UCLA for 12 years, Riley came back to his alma mater, ETSU, to be head coach of the Buccaneers.

But the schedule Riley inherited didn't exactly welcome him back with a smile. The Bucs stumbled through the year, finishing with a 3-8 record.

A mass of ETSU reserves, including freshman Paul Howell (32), watch the game intently from behind the sidelines inside Memorial Center.

The season started out just fine for Riley. He picked up his two first victories in his first two games, defeating Virginia Military Institute 26-10, and thumping Wofford 21-7.

Against VMI, Buc cornerback Rick Harris picked off three passes while running back Albert Burt rushed 15 times for 129 yards as he scored two touchdowns.

The Wofford Terriers held tight to the Bucs in the first half of their game, which was scoreless at half-time. That was soon to fall, though, as Burt rambled for 113 yards, and George Searcy rushed for three touchdowns to give Riley his second win, this time over the man he replaced, Mike Ayers.

ETSU then traveled to Western Carolina, where the Bucs' luck ran out . . . in a hurry.

The Catamounts' Darryl Jackson romped 66 yards on the opening play from scrimmage. Western scored soon after that when ETSU's Rodney Landreth muffed a (Continued on page 182)

Central Florida next came to town, and the Knights jumped to a 17-0 lead. The Bucs inched closer with touchdowns by Searcy and Rodney Jones before losing 23-17.

ETSU dropped five more games, against UT-Chattanooga, North Carolina State, Marshall, Appalachian State, and The Citadel, by a cumulative score of 231-48.

While under the shadow of a seven-game losing streak, the Bucs edged by Davidson 31-28. Searcy gained 119 yards on the ground as Burt scored three touchdowns to capture the victory.

The Bucs hosted Furman to close out the season, and the Paladins hardly gave Riley a going-away present to reflect on during

It was almost good enough, but not quite.

The ETSU golf team, in only its second year of existence placed second in the 1988 Southern Conference Championships.

With a team of three freshmen and two juniors, Buccaneer coach Fred Warren improved upon his team's last-place finish in the SC the year before.

Bobby Gage led the pack of golfers with a 74.03 scoring average per round. He tied for the individual championship of the Pan American Invitational in Monterrey, Mexico before losing the title in a sudden death playoff.

spring. He was runner-up in the Tennessee Amateur during the summer.

Chris Dibble averaged 76.23 a round and was champion of the Carson-Newman Smoky Mountain Invitational.

Also helping out on the Bucs were Mark Fry and Wes Odle. Fry averaged 76.25, and Odle ended with a 78.67 score.

In the conference championships, Gage finished sixth with a score of 231. Dibble was one stroke behind Gage and in seventh place. To create a bundle of Bucs in nearly the same spot, Kuramoto and Fry tied for eighth place in the SC.

While his ETSU golfers took the summer off, Warren was offered the head coaching job at UCLA, which had just won the NCAA Championships.

But he didn't want to leave.

"The overriding reason I chose to stay here was that for two years I had made a commitment to build this program, and I had made a commitment to the players, who had opportunities to go to other schools.

"And we hadn't accomplished what I had told them we could, which was to win the conference and to become national competitors. The timing for such a move would have been bad." I I I

On the strength of junior Mark Lupton-Smith, the ETSU men's tennis team racked up a spring of 1988 record of 26-5 and a fall of '88 record of 7-0.

Lupton-Smith, a Bedfordview, South Africa native, sported a 31-13 singles record during the spring and teamed up with John Lucchesi for a deadly 34-3 doubles record.

Despite their fine regular season performances, all was not rosy at the Southern Conference Championship, where the Buccaneers placed fourth in the eight-team field. ETSU finished the regular spring schedule third in the SC.

"I don't think we did completely what we were capable of doing in the championship," said Lucchesi, who finished the spring with a 28-12 singles record. "But we had a good spring."

"We played some good teams in the spring, and we were able to pull off some big upsets."

"In the championship, we thought we should have at least finished third, since Davidson finished in front of us, and we beat Davidson during the season."

Other top netters for ETSU included John Shulman, who notched a 25-12 spring mark. Steve Loring finished at 26-10, while John Seals was 30-13.

During the course of the season, the Bucs shut out five teams while losing only to Jefferson State, Georgia Southern, Lander, Furman, and Tennessee-Chattanooga.

Olympic athletes put on Oh, what a show!

Hoards of the world's best athletes converged on ETSU in late January for the Kodak Track and Field Invitational.

1988 Olympic Gold medalists were to be found everywhere. Roger Kingdom, winner of the 55-meter hurdles, was there. Romania's Mauricica Puica (3,000-meters), Gennadica Avieyenko of the Soviet Union (high jump), Louise Ritter (high jump), and Paul Ereng (800-meters) were also present.

But the field was so strong that most of those gold medalists took backseats to someone else.

Kingdom fell to Arthur Blake, who broke the 55-meter hurdles in 7.06 seconds, a Memorial Center record.

Puica lost the 3,000-meter run to Villanova's Vicki Huber.

Avieyenko finished fifth in the men's high jump while Jake Jacoby took first-place honors with a jump of 7-6.

The men's mile run again produced excitement, as the world's top miler, Marcus O'Sullivan finished in 3:57.60, almost a full second in front of Brian Jaeger. Former ETSU runner Ray Flynn came in fourth in the race.

The two-mile women's relay team from Villanova set a world's best of 8:37.75, nearly four seconds better than the record set by the Soviet National Team in 1972.

That mark was not considered a world's record, though, due to the Memorial Center track, which is oversized.

Regardless, that same Villanova team broke the record again at the Melrose Games a few weeks later, and they had their world's record.

Another big race was the men's 100-meter run, which was a rare indoor event. Due to the same oversized feature of Memorial Center, the event was held, and Emmitt King took advantage of it by setting an American indoor record of 10.45 seconds. 111

If only they could have stayed at home.

With a road record of 3-12 and a home mark of 7-2, the ETSU women's tennis team proved there was such a thing as home court advantage during the spring of 1988.

The women began their schedule by wiping away Tennessee Tech 9-0. They racked up three more sweeps during the course of the year, including two against Southern Conference foes Appalachian State and Marshall.

But the Lady Buccaneers dropped six matches by the same margin, three of which came in the last four encounters.

Susan Fronius headed up the women's team with a singles record of 12 wins and 7 losses. Becky Offenbacher added an 11-4 singles mark for the only other lady Buc with a winning record.

Also posting singles marks for the Lady Bucs were Wendy Lafever (9-9), Kristy Meyers (8-11), Karen Noe (6-13), Sandy Morrison (2-6), and Wendy Whiteside (4-15).

*S*tudents discover In-Rec has Something for everyone

The Intramural-Recreation Department had something for everyone this past year. Besides the standard football, basketball, and baseball, special activities were offered throughout the year.

In February and March, the Intramural Department along with the Campus Activities Board and the ETSU Ski Club hosted an informal ski trip to North Carolina. Both beginning and experienced skiers were encouraged to attend.

A big hit on campus was aerobics. With several classes throughout the week, students could pick and choose a time that best suited their schedule. Student teachers helped to make the classes fun and interesting to both students and faculty.

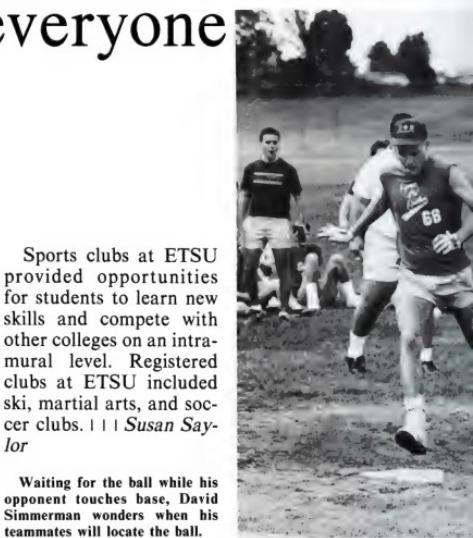

Sports clubs at ETSU provided opportunities for students to learn new skills and compete with other colleges on an intramural level. Registered clubs at ETSU included ski, martial arts, and soccer clubs. ||| Susan Saylor

"It's mine." Trying to intercept a pass, the players from Sigma Phi Epsilon and Tau Kappa Epsilon enjoy the fellowship in playing football.

Picturing the ball connecting with the bat, this baseball player is anticipating a hit.

Football was often a favorite pastime on campus. It allowed students to get to know each other outside of the classroom.

Putting power behind the ball is this batter's main concern.

Concentrating on striking out her opponent, Michelle Pettit sets her sights on the strike zone.

Sigma Chi Little Sisters and Delta Zeta Sorority always enjoyed an afternoon of football, especially when they got a chance to show that girls can play, too.

ORGANIZATIONS

A variety of student organizations, from those in professional fields to special interest groups emphasizing activities "just for fun," provided outlets for the particular talents and interests of students. They included religious organizations representing many denominations, band and choral music groups, assorted academic clubs, service fraternities, and departmental clubs.

High standards of learning

Alpha Lambda Delta was a national honor society whose purpose was to "encourage students in their first year in institutes of higher learning, to promote intelligent living and a continued high standard of learning and to assist men and women in recognizing and developing meaningful goals for their roles in society."

Founded as an honor society for freshman women at the University of Illinois in the spring of 1924, Alpha Lambda Delta became a national organization as chapters were established at Purdue in 1926 and at DePauw in 1927. Men were first admitted to membership in the fall of 1975.

The official symbol of Alpha Lambda Delta was a gold candle. The Greek letters were superimposed on the candle holder. The coat of arms displayed the colors in a gold-bordered black shield having a red-tipped white candle, above which was a white alter with an open book on it.

Membership was open to all freshman who were registered for a full course of study leading to a bachelor's degree and earn a 3.5 or higher. Eligibility was obtained on grades of one full semester or the cumulative average of the first year in college. Once initiated, an individual held a lifetime membership in Alpha Lambda Delta and could receive one of the $3000 Fellowships awarded for graduate study. |||

Seeking excellence in education

Gamma Beta Phi was a non-secret, non-profit, scholastic honor and educational-service organization opened to students who completed at least 15 hours of college work and ranked in the top 15% of their class. Graduate students were eligible for membership if they completed 15 hours of graduate work and ranked among the top 15% of graduate students.

Members were committed to excellence in education, good character, and service. Each semester members participated in community, church, and school service projects. ## Proud to be a part

To the sisters of Kappa Delta, being in a sorority meant more than just competing in various Greek and campus activities. Kappa Delta was founded on Christian principles in 1897 and still strove to reach those goals.

Being a member of a sorority was a truly rewarding experience; the bonds of friendships formed were meant to last a lifetime. Their goal was to reach that which is honorable, beautiful, and highest, and they achieved this by helping those who were less fortunate. This was done through their philanthropy organizations and through volunteer work in the community.

Kappa Delta ranked first among all the sororities scholastically in the fall of 1988, and several members belonged to various honor society on campus. Their awards and honors included Volunteer ETSU Group-of-the-Year, and they were first in Homecoming competition for the second year in a row.

The group sponsored "KD Holly Days" in December, and their Christmas Informal was sponsored by the pledges. The annual Mother-Daughter Banquet was held in November, and the White Rose Dinner was held in February. They also sponsored various other activities to raise money for the National Committee for the Prevention of Child Abuse. Kappa Delta led an active role on campus and in community activities and were proud to be a part of ETSU's Greek World. ||| Tammy Smith

'First and finest' develops special bonds

"First and finest," Alpha Delta Pi boasted of being the first secret society for women. Founded in 1851 at Wesleyan College in Macon, Georgia, Alpha Delta Pi was based on the principles of scholarship, service, standards, and sisterhood.

Alpha Delta Pi promoted the idea of service through Volunteer ETSU and their national philanthropy, the Ronald McDonald Houses. Alpha Delta Pi's throughout the U.S. and Canada donated more than one million dollars to the Ronald McDonald Corporation. On the local level, Alpha Delta Pi hosted Diamond Days, an annual fraternity competition in which the proceeds also went to the philanthropy.

Outstanding chapter achievements included first place in Sigma Chi's Derby Days, Sigma Nu's Snake Days, and Pike's Peak. They also received second place in the large group division and the "Most Entertaining" award in Lambda Chi Alpha's All Sing.

Alpha Delta Pi colors were azure blue and white. The flower was the woodland violet and their gem the blue-white diamond. Their mascot, Alphie the Lion, symbolized strength of character and represented a quality sought in members. Inherent in every Alpha Delta Pi was the belief that by supporting one another and sharing a special bond, they could grow into the best individuals they could possibly become. ||| Jodye Vanjoy. # Reaching out key to success

Delta Zeta sorority strove to maintain a strong bond of sisterhood among its members. The sorority was also a strong supporter of high academic attainment and community participation.

Founded on October 24, 1902 at Miami University in Oxford, Ohio, Delta Zeta was the nation's second largest sorority. Here at ETSU, Delta Zeta was a strong extension of the values and services which the National Chapter instilled in all its chapters. Delta Zeta was a close-knit sisterhood where bonds of friendship and sisterly love came to mean much to its members, yet the sorority was continually reaching out to other young women at ETSU with open arms of friendship and Christian fellowship.

Delta Zetas were involved in nearly all campus activities and participated in many Greek sponsored events. The sisters volunteered their time to the Special Olympics as well as supporting the Life Care Center of Erwin. On a national level, Delta Zetas were strong advocates of helping the speech and hearing impaired all over the United States.

The mascot, Tippy the Turtle, became a symbol of care, understanding, friendship, and fun to Delta Zetas. The sorority colors were old rose and nile green, and their gem was the diamond. They welcomed each new member with devotion and with their flower, the Killarney Rose. ||| Dawn Graybeal. Photos submitted by Delta Zeta.

Phi Mu was founded in 1852 at Wesleyan College in Macon, Georgia. Phi Mu Fraternity grew to become one of the oldest and leading organizations of college women. Based on the ideals "love, honor, truth," Phi Mu members strove to help each other achieve and reach their full potential.

In the past year Phi Mu received the overall Greek Financial Award and the sisterhood award, which they have received three of the past five years. Phi Mu participated in many community and campus activities including Homecoming in which they placed third. They also participated in Derby Days, Pike's Peak, Snake Days, All Sing, Exam Jam, and activities such as Special Olympics. Among its fund raisers were Project Hope and Childrens' Miracle Network Telethon which locally supported Holston Valley Hospital.

United in sincere friendship

Sigma Kappa's purpose was to unite its members in a bond of sincere friendship while promoting the highest standards of social, intellectual, and spiritual well-being. The sorority was founded in 1874 at Colby College in Maine. Their colors were lavender and maroon. Their symbols were the dove, serpent, triangle, and heart. Sigma Kappa's flower was the violet and their jewel was the pearl.

The Gamma Lambda chapter was involved in many activities, both on and off campus. The local philanthropy was the Veteran's Administration. National philanthropies included the Maine Sea Coast Mission, The American Farm School, and Alzheimer's Disease.

The purposes of the Sigma Kappa were to promote a strong bond of sisterhood while maintaining high academics standards. Some of their activities for 1989 were to host the annual Sportman's Klassic and to participate in the Homecoming activities, Derby Days, Pike's Peak, and All Sing. Some of the awards won by the group were the Volunteer ETSU group of the year and the Financial Management Award. ||| Photos by Virginia Holt and Debbie Shell

Sigma Chi began at ETSU in May of 1969 with the intentions of striving to uphold the principles of friendship, justice, and learning upon which Sigma Chi was founded. The Sigma Chi national fraternity had over 200,000 members from 210 chapters across the United States and Canada.

ETSU's Sigma Chi achieved the over-all Intramural Championship at ETSU for a total of 16 years.

Sigma Chi fraternity participated in numerous service projects sponsored by Volunteer ETSU and also by the group themselves. Sigma Chi sponsored "Derby Days," a fun-filled week of games which concluded with a two day sorority competition. # Fraternity sets goals of honor, chivalry

Lambda Chi Alpha helped to develop true character in each of its members. Maintaining honor, chivalry, unselfishness, tolerance, and loyalty to Christian principles were goals the fraternity tried to uphold. In April 1984 the Iota Omicron chapter of Lambda Chi Alpha was recognized by the National Fraternity. Eight young men were chosen to be the founding fathers of the new colony. Each was different from the other, but they all had a common goal. Lambda Chi Alpha became a strong leader among the Greek community at ETSU.

On campus the fraternity was involved with giving to the United Way and participating in Homecoming activities. Lambda Chi Alpha tied with Sigma Kappa for the winner of the Homecoming banner competition in the Greek division. The creativity of the Sigma Nu brothers shines proudly in this feature jack-o'-lantern.

Being "the total college experience" takes a lot of work, and it took a lot of work to prepare this uncommon float for the 1988 Homecoming Parade.

The total experience

Sigma Nu fraternity evolved from the "Legion of Honor" organized at Virginia Military Institute. "A fraternity founded upon a good education, while at the same time making lifelong friends and against hazing" describes the basic goals of this brotherhood.

As the "total experience" fraternity, they were as active on campus as off this past year. On campus, they captured first place in Phi Mu's Lion's Roar and Sigma Kappa's Sportsman's Classic and held on to second place in Kappa Delta's Holly Days. Off campus, their projects included building exhibits in the Hands On Children's Museum and participating in the filming of Aerosmith's video "Rag Doll."

The "total experience" can be summed up by Mark Bowman, who said that "Sigma Nu has brought me much enjoyment and many lifelong friends. I love it!"

Back to the basics brotherhood

The three basic ideas for Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity were love, charity, and esteem. Drawing support from all its members there was a strengthening bond created within the three. Tau Kappa Epsilon was a group that set goals to help in the community and society also.

The group won such honors and awards as the scholarship award and Volunteer Group-of-the-Month for the month of May. The fraternity was known for having the highest grade point average among the Greeks. Tau Kappa Epsilon also participated in many of the on-campus activities which were sponsored by other fraternities and sororities. The theme that was used during fall rush this year was getting back to the basics, which was achieved by holding meetings outside and using plain gray t-shirts with the Greek symbols on them. Photos submitted by Tau Kappa Epsilon

The secret of family

Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity was founded on November 1, 1901, at Richmond College, Richmond, Virginia. Tennessee Gamma Chapter was founded on April 10, 1954, from the local Nu Sigma Alpha Fraternity becoming the first national fraternity at East Tennessee State University.

Service to the University and the community was a major strength of the chapter. Members of Sigma Phi Epsilon annually manned the booths for the Red Cross Blood Drives, collected for the Heart Fund, and supported the Special Olympics. In the fall of 1988 members logged over 1500 volunteer hours.

Sigma Phi Epsilon, the largest fraternity on campus and in the nation, hosted a full calendar each year. Events ranged from Cost Cutter Weekend, to Exam Jam, to Fair of the Heart, to Heaven and Hell Mixer, to a spring formal.

Members were proud of their ability to maintain a balance among scholarship, sports, social events, and service functions. Herein, they found the secret of a close fraternal family. | | | Photos submitted by Sigma Phi Epsilon

Student advocates strive for success

The Student Government Association had some much needed continuity this year when for only the second time in ETSU history the student body elected an SGA president for a second term. Jason Eagle, president, was not the only continuity in a leadership role. Ken Miller, who had served two years as chief justice, was elected vice president, and Kris Shelley brought her year of SGA experience to the secretary/treasurer's desk. The trio felt that one of the contributing reasons for their successful year was that they ran on a ticket.

The main goals of the Student Government Association this year was to be a student advocate. They strove to bring the students' concerns to the administration.

Student Government also provided many services to the students including the Buc-saver Card, a student handbook, and they sponsored a free concert and a pep rally/bonfire. SGA addressed the problem of parking by educating the students and promoting the transit system. Finally, SGA also continued the tradition of supervising the annual Homecoming activities that were held in October.

During February-March selected changes occurred in the SGA Cabinet following the impeachment of President Eagle, Vice President Miller becoming president, and Steve Erdly assuming the post of vice president. Photos submitted by the Student Government Association

Group sets goal of enhancing college life

The Baptist Student Union was a student-led organization which hosted many activities which enhanced college life. Meetings were held at the Baptist University Center. There were weekly times of fellowship planned around meals on Mondays and Wednesdays called Noonday with devotions led by students, staff, or local ministers. There was also King's Hour on Tuesday evenings which included a meal and an hour variety workshop program. The Baptist Student Union was also known for welcoming new students to fellowship through music, Bible Study, discussion of various important issues, games, and movies.

homecoming, intramurals, and campus ministries. The BSU participated in many community service projects including hosting an annual Christmas party for the residents of the Tennessee Baptist Children's Home and the Alternative Home.

The BSU sponsored conferences, missions, and ministry opportunities nationally and internationally. The organization cooperated with state, national and worldwide baptist programs. The BSU invited students to a full menu of down-home fun, not to mention cooking, and to be a part of "a group with a purpose."

Bringing you the best

The Campus Activities Board programmed entertainment for the entire campus community. From the Miss ETSU Pageant to the "1964 as the Beatles" Homecoming Concert to jazz singer Jane Powell, they were proud to have had such a successful year.

The group sponsored Cabaret, billed as ETSU's own nightclub. Jones and Jools, a live comedy act performed in the cave in October after comedian Haywood Banks kicked off the season of performances in September.

Also sponsored by the group was a pep bus to the Appalachian State College football game. In addition, students wishing to hear the latest news on campus events could dial 929-4FUN. An events calendar was also available for information about happenings and included valuable coupons.

Entirely run by student volunteers, the Campus Activities Board welcomed all interested students who were interested in becoming a part of the organization. The office was located on the second level of the D.P. Culp University Center. Photos submitted by the Campus Activities Board.

ADVERTISING

Advertisers supported many of ET&U's organizations and campus activities. Through gifts, donations, and sponsorship, these area advertisers helped to achieve a balance between the school and community. Students and parents, and faculty and staff members patronized these businesses in return. Because of this, ET&U and area businesses existed in a mutually benefiting environment. III Sarah Jamerison

A COMING TOGETHER

The coming together of many diverse people and events contributed to the come-as-you-are atmosphere. From the National Junior Wheelchair Olympics to the Eastman Kodak Track and Field Invitational, athletes arrived with different abilities, goals, and convictions. From the production of "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum" to Homecoming's Skit Night, actors and amateurs found their audience. From record-breaking high temperatures in January to record-breaking enrollment in August, outside forces made their impressions.

The young and old, leaders and followers, teachers and students, listeners and complainers, native Tennesseans and Native Americans all produced interest and variety for the school year. Because of these relationships, the university was able to work with its many components to build a complete college experience for its students. ++ Sarah Jameson Performing at the Activities Fair, The Ultimate Nerd entertained with his stock of jokes and one-liners.

Foreign students seemed to enjoy the East Tennessee campus as much as the residents did.

Differing academic abilities made honor programs and tutoring labs necessary for students.

Even children from the Childhood Development Center on campus got into the come-as-you-are spirit during Halloween.

Ballgames drew school-spirited crowds from all over the area, but some fans expressed their enthusiasm more vividly than others.

COME AS YOU CARE

Having the last word with a sense of humor was important to these students after many semesters of listening to professors and abiding by administrative rules.

Colophon. Volume 77 of the East Tennessee State University Buccaneer Yearbook was printed by Jostens Printing and Publishing Division, 1312 Dickson Highway, Clarksville, Tennessee, 37040.
